<td>A treeless area between the icecap and the tree line of Arctic regions, having permanently frozen subsoil and supporting low-growing vegetation such as lichens, mosses, and stunted shrubs.</td>
<td>The unavailability of water is the chief defining feature of this biome, as it receives less than 9.9 in. (25 cm) of precipitation per year. Conditions are extremely dry and support virtually no plant productivity and therefore little, if any, animal life either.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This Biome is found in mountain ranges all over the world. This biome is usually above 10,000 ft. This biome has unique seasons, with its &quot;winter&quot; lasting about 7 months. &quot;Alps&quot; is the Latin word for &quot;high mountain&quot;.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A forest located in the Earth's far northern regions, consisting mainly of cone-bearing evergreens, such as firs, pines, and spruces, and some deciduous trees, such as larches, birches, and aspens. This biome is found just south of the tundra.</td>
<td>A biome characterized by hot dry summers and cool moist winters and dominated by a dense growth of mostly small-leaved evergreen shrubs. This biome is found in a little bit of most of the continents.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The word for this biome means “to fall” – it refers to the leaves of the trees, which fall off or shed each winter. The deciduous forest has four distinct seasons, spring, summer, autumn, and winter. In the autumn the leaves change colour.</td>
